My Terra Cotta Warrior

More than 2000 years ago Emperor Qin had an entire terra cotta (clay) army created near Xi'an, China. The clay army had more than 8000 statues – warriors and horses. Each one was unique. Each one was painted bright colors.

In 1974, a farmer was digging in his field and came upon one of the terra cotta soldiers. Since then, archeologists have unearthed thousands of items. Millions of visitors come to Xi'an every year to see them.
